

Post-It cover with Paperfuel

Do you often find yourself jotting down notes on a Post-It? Keep your Post-It pad protected with a beautiful handmade cover. In this DIY project, we'll use scrapbook paper and clear stamps from Paperfuel. In just 15 steps, you'll create a small booklet that's not only practical to carry around but also makes a thoughtful gift!

Take an A4 sheet of grey cardboard and draw two squares, each measuring 8 x 8 cm, and one rectangle of 1 x 8 cm.

Place the cardboard on a cutting mat and use an aluminium ruler and craft knife to cut out the shapes.

Take a sheet of scrapbook paper and align the We R Makers Book Cover Guide in a corner. Position one of the 8 x 8 cm cardboard squares on top and secure it with bookbinding glue.

Rotate the Book Cover Guide 90 degrees and use the narrow section to align and attach the 1 x 8 cm cardboard piece.

Repeat this process for the remaining piece of cardboard.

Next, place the Book Cover Guide at a right angle to each corner and trim off any excess paper.

Use the Book Cover Guide's notches to cut the corners of the paper at an angle.

Fold all the paper flaps over and glue them down securely.

Take two pieces of black satin ribbon and attach them as shown in the photo.

Cut a rectangle measuring 7.5 x 17.5 cm from another sheet of scrapbook paper.

Glue this rectangle over the cardboard and ribbons, making sure to score the fold lines for a crisp finish. Then, attach a block of Post-Its.

Grab a black sheet of cardstock and stamp a fun message on it using Versamark ink.

Sprinkle clear embossing powder over the stamped text and heat it with a heat tool until the powder turns fully transparent.

Use a circle punch to cut the text out precisely in the centre of a circle.

Punch another circle from white paper and glue the two circles slightly overlapping on the front cover.
