Adequacy of distribution conditions and restrictions

We have concluded that the distribution conditions and restrictions will make it likely that a consumer who acquires the product will be in the class of consumers for which it has been designed.

This is based on an assessment of the distribution conditions and the appropriateness of them to assist distribution being targeted towards the class of consumers within the target market. For example, the clearly set out eligibility criteria enable distributors to ask 'knock out' questions to determine if a consumer meets the Eligibility Requirements of the product.

Additionally, the requirement of distributors to be accredited and trained with Brighte ensures that product features, and the type of consumer needs and objectives the product is designed for, are well understood. These are considered adequate in supporting the distribution of the product in accordance with the objectives, financial situation and needs of the class of consumers outlined above.

Regardless of the distribution channel used, all applications are required to be made via Brighte application systems. These systems seek and require a certain amount of information to establish whether the consumer meets the Eligibility Requirements. This information is assessed against the credit assessment criteria prior to approval to determine if the consumer falls within the target market prior to the product being issued.
